

CAPITAL-GAZETTE
“American Idol”
(Meade edition)
planned for April

BY ALEX WILLIAMS
Meade High School

“Meade Idol” is more than a school-related event, just as the Super Bowl is more than a sports competition.

“Meade Idol” shows that Meade Senior High cares about its students’ success, and is willing to spend time, dedication and money to show the students that it does.

PBIS is an administration and staff organization designed to promote positive student behaviors at Meade High School, and is sponsoring “Meade Idol” for only those students who have exhibited the student core values during second quarter.

This PBIS event started to create a school-wide buzz back in early February.

The name was inspired by the popular show “American Idol,” and keeps the concept of competition between various singing groups or persons. Students quickly made the connection and assumed that Meade High would be hosting a talent show of its own, a promotion strategy that worked toward PBIS’s favor as a lot of students signed up to audition.

PBIS Committee member and counselor at Meade High School, Pia Noon, stated that the PBIS-sponsored event of “Meade Idol” was created to boost student morale as well as “promote positive attitudes and school spirit,” among the students here at Meade High.

. . . “Each member of the PBIS program here at Meade plays a significant part in helping the event become successful . . .”